Season Tickets

Summer is winding down, school is back in session and people are getting ready to purchase season tickets for fall sports. Almost everybody I know has a favorite team they follow. If you are fortunate enough to have season tickets, I hope you have great seats, where you can cheer your team on all season long, up close and personal.

Many of you already know that my favorite sport is men's college basketball, and that my favorite team is the University of Kentucky Wildcats. I don't have season tickets but I have occasionally scored some seats in Rupp Arena, where they play their home games. Most of the time my tickets are for a seat high up in the nose bleed section. The lower seats closer to the floor are always taken by season ticket holders who have probably held them for years.

The best seats for popular events are always scooped up quickly. As soon as they go on sale to the public it seems like the good ones are already taken. Most avid sports fans are so passionate about their team that they would give almost anything to have those prime seats. The same goes for music lovers who flock to concerts with hundreds or thousands of other fans. A lot of money might be spent just to get in the door, even if you're buried way in the back, far from the stage.

If you are lucky enough to have some seats to some events this fall, go for it, make a memory. Hey, maybe you can even share an extra ticket with someone and make a new friend. God is so good. He gives us resources beyond our material needs. As Amy Grant said years ago, "If anything good happens in life, it's from Jesus."

One quick disclaimer regarding all of this: don't forget the One who makes all this possible. Jesus is there every time we get out of bed and put our feet on the solid floor beneath us. If you woke up today and are healthy, you are blessed. Keep worship, prayer, and service to others scheduled into your busy lives, along with entertainment and fun.

I hope your team or favorite band have a great year. Just try not forget your God who makes life possible. Grab a front-row seat in a place where people gather to honor God, too. He is also worthy of our praise. Go God.

Moving forward
God is Good
